PORSCHE 906 PRINT BY AUTOMOBILIST

In qualifying at the 1967 12 Hours of Sebring, the Ed Hugus/John Cannon 906 was fully 18 seconds off the pace of the McLaren/Andretti Ford GT40, and in the race it conked out, but we guarantee that everyone in the crowd that day remembers the Porsche, which wore a can't-miss-it bumblebee livery.

KRATE-STYLE BIKE BY PEDAL CHOPPER

Take a ride down memory lane without doing yourself a mischief: Pedal Chopper's builds look just like the banana bikes that littered driveways in the 1960s and '70s, but they're scaled up for adult use.

GREEN FLUO LAMP BY NOTARGIACOMO DESIGN

No, it's not a printing error: that salvaged Gallardo valve cover is indeed floating in space between the shade and the base, or at least it appears to be: Stefano Notargiacomo's lamp design features a transparent support that all but disappears when viewed from the front.

GULF FORD GT40 MODEL BY AMALGAM

While we love Amalgam's recent 'race-weathered' models, we're glad to see this new, 1:8-scale rendering of the 1969 Le Mans winner resplendent in pristine Gulf colours – it looks a million dollars, which means, we suppose, that it has to be considered a bargain, even at eleven grand.
